A debt, a theft, a death

After leaving prison, Román arrives at a seaside hotel in the Caribbean to claim an old debt. When his former accomplice, the hotel's owner, gives him far less than he expected, Román decides to pressure him by staying at the hotel. One night, someone goes into his room and steals all his money. Román blames two Spanish girls with whom he spent the night. When he attempts to retrieve his money, one of the girls is accidentally killed. Soon, other deaths follow, transforming the peaceful holiday into a nightmare.
